(HIMSELF)

"Hello Folks"

THE BIG DAY — I am writing this at 1 a. m. Wednesday morning—just about one hour after the shooting and shouting—all for a reminder of that minute when PEACE was paved—what a moment it was years ago—never can the hundreds of thousands of the best men and women of the various countries ever forget it—war is R—and many went through it—few if any crave for more of it—so here's hoping we shall always have enough business of our own—to attend to at home—without having to seek that of others abroad again—we never will, if we mind our own business—and care for the needy in this country—yes it's all over as far as the profiteers are concerned—but it is NOT ALL OVER as far as the suffering of the boys are concerned—the invisible and visible wounded can never be repaid for some of their sufferings—tonight I saw a young fellow about 35 years of age—come into a store with only ONE LEG—not even a wooden leg did he have—just a stub—fine looking fellow—seemed as contented as any man I ever saw—seemed to be a soldier—through life showing the effects of war in a painful way—thousands of others go through life showing the results of the war to them by their SPLENDOR and LUXURIES—that's the difference—yes war is worse than Sherman said it was—may our schools hereafter teach LOVE AND PEACE instead of SHOT GUNS, BOMBS, POISON GAS and BLOOD—on top of it all, the medics are fighting to prevent the boys from receiving government medical treatment, so they will have to give their earnings to local members of the county societies—the LEGION IS FOR SUCH—the WAR VETERANS against it—here's hoping the latter wins, for the benefit of all who need medical care, so they can receive it in the best equipped hospitals, where expense is NO OBJECT.

NOT SO BAD—Dog gone it—I just so have to hand it to Russia—even though some want to to cuss her—we take our prisoners, throw some in solitary confinement, make them sleep on concrete floors, get sick and die—treat them like dogs—but Russian, puts a Radio in each cell, gives each prisoner two weeks vacation a year—they can go where they please—do as they please—each is trained for a job—when he comes out—he has a trade to support himself with—that's NOT SO BAD—I bet they have little trouble with prisoners in Russia, prisons with that kind of treatment—you can drive one to drink—but it's hard to make them drink.

TARIFF—some writers are now blaming it for the depression—that is not the cause—the depression is here—Europe and everywhere—except Russia—they feel it the least—it came because that group which controls over 1-3 the buying power of the country is being robbed—they are the farmers—coaxed to sell their stuff for nothing—then when it was sold they came out with the truth and said—Europe is short of farm produce—they knew it last summer—but would not say it until the farmer was influenced to sell most of his crop for practically nothing.

NEGROES—we hear a lot about them down south—we don't hear all however—Mound Bayon is strictly a negro settlement—not a white there—it is in Mississippi—they have not had one occasion to put a negro in jail in two years—they tore down the jail to make room for another building—NOT BAD AT ALL—there's bad in the best of us—good in the worst of us.

Millionaire Furrier Is Released By His Abductors

ST. LOUIS MAN DENIES PAYING RANSOM FUND

Alexander Berg Is Turned Loose Upon Downtown Street

By ROBERT A. HEREFORD

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — (INS)—Apparently having effected a truce with the kidnap gang which held him captive for five days, Alexander Berg, millionaire furrier, returned to his home at an early hour today. Berg, the third wealthy St. Louisian to be kidnapped within the year, was driven to his hotel here in a taxicab shortly after midnight.

Was Still Bound

When released by his captors on a busy street near his hotel home Berg was still bound, police said. In a statement given out by the furrier's family shortly after Berg's return, it was said that no ransom had been paid. The kidnapers were reported to have demanded $100,000 for Berg's release.

The statement said the millionaire was released to John T. Rodgers, a reporter for the Post-Dispatch. Dr. Isaac D. Kelly, prominent physician and the second of the trio to be kidnapped within the past year also was released to Rodgers. The first of the three wealthy St. Louisians to be kidnapped was Joseph P. Bush, a prominent businessman and internationally famous brewer.

Kidnaped Last Friday

Berg was kidnaped last Friday night when his limousine driven by a negro chauffeur halted for a traffic signal in the west end. According to the story told by Albert Pike, the chauffeur, the gunmen entered the limousine, one jumping into the rear seat with Berg and the other taking his place in the front seat with the chauffeur.

They ordered Pike to drive to a lonely road where, according to Pike, he was instructed to leave the car. The captors disappeared with the millionaire.

President Delivers an Armistice Day Address

By EDWARD O. MAYL
WASHINGTON — (INS)—Thirteen years to the hour after the guns ceased booming on the western front, President Hoover stood on a flag-draped platform here today and expressed the conviction that despite the turbulence of world affairs for the past year progress is steadily being made toward the twin goal of disarmament and world peace.

"The outstanding problem of statesmanship today," he said, "is every country and in every part of the world is to re-establish confidence, not alone each nation in its institutions, but among nations."

Refers to Depression
This declaration immediately followed a reference to the trying economic times through which the world has been passing during the last two years—trying, he said, that "the stability of many nations has been greatly shaken."

"No greater contribution can be made," he went on, "to economic relief than day-to-day conclusive demonstration that progress is being made in relieving stress and strain which now so oppress the atmosphere of the family of nations."

Such action requires no treaties, no documents and no commitments. It requires only that each nation realize the situation that exists; that it contribute in its own policies and within its own best interest to the building of good will and the rebuilding of confidence.

"That progress is being made," China Warfare Evaded
Mr. Hoover made no reference in his address to the open warfare between Japan and China in Manchuria, nor to the troubled state of European affairs.

Says That Japanese Cannot Drive Him From Manchuria

By JOHN GOETTE
PEIPING — (INS)—General Ma Chan-Shan today defied the Japanese to drive him out of Manchuria.

Interviewed by radio at his headquarters at Tsitsihar, 700 miles north of here, the Heilungkiang military commander declared that Japanese airplanes had been bombing his advance lines for four days, but that his soldiers would "resist unto death" any further efforts by the Japanese to enlarge their Manchurian zone of occupation.

"General Honjo (Japanese commander at Mukden) has called upon me both formally and informally to resign, but I see no reason to do so, as I was appointed of the Heilungkiang government," Ma Chan-Shan declared.

Planes Bomb Lines

"For four days Japanese airplanes have been bombing our lines. Perhaps their gun fire is better than ours, even now Japanese reinforcements are arriving from Korea, placing a much bigger force opposite my lines."

"But despite all that my troops stand ready to fight as a last resort."

RELATIVE IS CAUGHT WITH FULL 19 PINTS

President's Brother-in-Law Nabbed With Sack of 'Booze'

SANTA MONICA, Cal. — (INS)—C. V. "Van" Leavitt, retired plumber and brother-in-law of President Hoover, today reiterated his denial that he was guilty of running from a grocery store with a gunny sack containing 19 pints of whiskey when he was arrested by federal prohibition agents.

Leavitt was at liberty under $250 bond returnable Monday in the court of Police Judge Walter Spencer in Santa Monica. He was charged with possession of liquor.

"I was left holding the sack, literally and figuratively," Leavitt said. "I was in the store weighing myself on some scales when somebody should have arrested me. Tommy Carr," declared Leavitt.

"A minute later somebody handed me a sack and said: 'Get rid of this.'"

Wanted to Be Good Fellow
"I didn't know what was in the sack but I tried to be a 'Good Fellow' and started to run out the back door."

"Just as I stepped into the alley the federal men stopped me, opened the sack and found it filled with whiskey pints. I was arrested. One of the officers recognized me, and he didn't seem to know what to do. When I was arraigned the officer insisted I use the name Mr. Jones. I objected, but he insisted."

Cliff R. Dailley, proprietor of the store, also was arrested and held. Dailley denied he was the man that had handed Leavitt the gunny sack.

Victim of Circumstances
"I was waiting on a customer at the time. I didn't know the gunny sack was in the store. I think the officers got the wrong man. Leavitt is a victim of circumstances," Dailley said.

"I think the officers were chasing a bootlegger known in these parts and the bootlegger entered the store with a sack, then ran out empty handed," Dailley continued. Leavitt, whose wife, Mrs. Mary H. Leavitt, is the only sister of the president, said they had carefully avoided publicity as relatives of Hoover during the latter's campaign to be president.

"I don't agree exactly with Hoover on the dry question, but I wasn't drinking when the federal agents arrested me," Leavitt said.

"While I was weighing a trunk driver entered the back door of the store and asked me to have a drink. I turned it down. I was standing there talking to him when somebody ran back with the sack which I was left holding."

"I guess anybody would try to help another fellow out in a case like that, so I grabbed the sack and made for the alley."

TURNER SPEAKS AT SHENANDOAH

Governor Lauds Law Enforcement on Armistice Day

Best evidence of this is the fact that it has stood the test for a century and a half of time and the further fact that nearly every civilized country in the world has taken example from our form of government and the success or failure of these governments can be judged by the accuracy they display in adhering to the American principle in preserving the rights of men and in guaranteeing stability in government.

Lauds American Government

In the early history of this country it was hardly necessary to call attention to the merits of the American form of government, but in this day when there is more or less unrest and when other governments of the world, just emerging from monarchy, are finding it difficult to preserve their institutions, it will be a good thing for all Americans on Armistice day to obtain a true understanding of the principles and responsibilities that accrue under representative government—to preserve the institutions of liberty, to insist on respect for law, to preserve the heritage that comes down to us from the patriots.

In the preamble of the constitution of the American Legion there is a statement that should challenge the interests and become the accepted axiom of every American citizen. It is a resolution in simple phrase, expressing the members of that great organization and the citizens of this country to "maintain law and order." We might as well recognize the fact that our competency in self-government can be accurately measured by our attitude toward maintenance of the laws of the land.

Disregard of Law

Disregard of law is the first step, and a long step toward anarchy. If you were to give in one sentence, the reason for the inability of our people to rule themselves; if you were to name the characteristic that proves their capacity for self-government; it would be that they are capable of and willing to observe the laws of the land.

There is an orderly process when the majority will it, through which laws can be repealed but every citizen should realize that the responsibility of upholding, and the vital necessity of obedience to, all the laws on the statute books. In fact a government that cannot enforce the laws of the land is no government. We take great pride in the fact that we have majority rule in this country. Let us thoroughly and effectively maintain the institutions of liberty that there may never be a shadow of a doubt that these institutions will be destroyed.

Testing Time Here

Our people have proved their capacity for self-government but in different periods in our history we must to through a testing time. We are apparently going through such a period now. If sensible, sane reasoning marks the era there can be no doubt of the outcome. We take great pride in the fact that we have majority rule in this country. Let us thoroughly and effectively maintain the institutions of liberty that there may never be a shadow of a doubt that these institutions will be destroyed.

Hope Dwindles for 11 Men Who Are Adrift on Ocean

Rescue Ship Fails to Find Raft at Spot It Was Sighted

COLON, Panama. (INS)—Hope for the rescue of eleven men sighted floating in a lifeboat off the coast of Colombia dwindled today when the United States mine sweeper Swan wireless it had reached the spot where the craft was seen but could find no trace of it.

Heavy seas were running, increasing the chances that the survivors had perished. The Swan wireless it was continuing the search.

The search was organized here after the lifeboat was sighted by the plot of a passenger plane flying over Panama and Colombia. It was believed here that the men were survivors of the steamship Baden, which is overdue here and may have foundered during the Caribbean storm last week.

International News Service received a message from Captain Tenk-Loster of the Steamship Costa Rica in the Caribbean, stating he had searched for several hours for the lifeboat, but without result.

Two of the men held for questioning are Louis Spennill and Joseph Costello, friends of the Berg family who apparently were about to negotiate with the kidnappers when they were seized at Congress street and Wabash avenue Monday night. The Berg family was agreed upon as the rendezvous by the kidnappers and Berg's family.

In one of Spennill's pockets was a letter from the kidnappers to the Berg family, but authors refused to disclose the contents of the letter.

Six Gangsters Seized Shortly after Spennill's arrest, detectives seized Mangano and four others who gave their names as Paul Palmeri, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Frank Chivavolli, Chicago; Sylvester Agrolia, Chicago and Angelo Caruso of New York.

Taken to police headquarters, Mangano and his companions denied they knew Berg. They likewise denied any knowledge of the further kidnapping.

Information obtained by the "Secret Six" crime fighting organization, led to the gang's seizure. Operatives of the crime fighting unit learned that the downtown street corner had been agreed upon as the rendezvous by the kidnappers and the kidnap ring as a meeting place.

Mangano, listed as one of Chicago's public enemies, is facing deportation in the federal government's latest drive against aliens. Meanwhile police were searching for two automobiles here which were used in the kidnapping of Ralph J. "Pump" Pearce, Rockford, Ill. gambler who was released last night.

Pearce was arrested last night when he appeared in Rockford. Whether a ransom was paid to gain Pearce's release was not determined. The ransom was set at $25,000 at first but was later cut to $6,000.

Fat Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney's office, here, hurried to Rockford to question the gambler.

AL CAPONE'S HENCHMAN HELD

'Dago' Mangano Said To Be Member of a Big Kidnap Ring

until this afternoon to place formal charges against the kidnapping suspects.

Police regarded as significant the fact that after the arrest of Mangano, Berg returned unharmed to his home in St. Louis and that Ralph J. "Pump" Pearce, abducted Rockford, Ill. gambler, was released here last night.

The kidnappers are said to have compromised for $6,000 for Berg's release, although they originally demanded $25,000.

Armed with a detailed description of two automobiles used in the Pearce kidnapping, police were searching the city today in the hope of locating one of them. One of the automobiles bore a Washington, D. C., license while the other had Illinois plates.

Two of the men held for questioning are Louis Spennill and Joseph Costello, friends of the Berg family who apparently were about to negotiate with the kidnappers when they were seized at Congress street and Wabash avenue Monday night. The Berg family was agreed upon as the rendezvous by the kidnappers and Berg's family.

In one of Spennill's pockets was a letter from the kidnappers to the Berg family, but authors refused to disclose the contents of the letter.

Six Gangsters Seized Shortly after Spennill's arrest, detectives seized Mangano and four others who gave their names as Paul Palmeri, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Frank Chivavolli, Chicago; Sylvester Agrolia, Chicago and Angelo Caruso of New York.

Taken to police headquarters, Mangano and his companions denied they knew Berg. They likewise denied any knowledge of the further kidnapping.

Hope Dwindles for 11 Men Who Are Adrift on Ocean

Rescue Ship Fails to Find Raft at Spot It Was Sighted

COLON, Panama. (INS)—Hope for the rescue of eleven men sighted floating in a lifeboat off the coast of Colombia dwindled today when the United States mine sweeper Swan wireless it had reached the spot where the craft was seen but could find no trace of it.

Heavy seas were running, increasing the chances that the survivors had perished. The Swan wireless it was continuing the search.

The search was organized here after the lifeboat was sighted by the plot of a passenger plane flying over Panama and Colombia. It was believed here that the men were survivors of the steamship Baden, which is overdue here and may have foundered during the Caribbean storm last week.

International News Service received a message from Captain Tenk-Loster of the Steamship Costa Rica in the Caribbean, stating he had searched for several hours for the lifeboat, but without result.

Information obtained by the "Secret Six" crime fighting organization, led to the gang's seizure. Operatives of the crime fighting unit learned that the downtown street corner had been agreed upon as the rendezvous by the kidnappers and the kidnap ring as a meeting place.

Mangano, listed as one of Chicago's public enemies, is facing deportation in the federal government's latest drive against aliens. Meanwhile police were searching for two automobiles here which were used in the kidnapping of Ralph J. "Pump" Pearce, Rockford, Ill. gambler who was released last night.

Pearce was arrested last night when he appeared in Rockford. Whether a ransom was paid to gain Pearce's release was not determined. The ransom was set at $25,000 at first but was later cut to $6,000.

Fat Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney's office, here, hurried to Rockford to question the gambler.

THE MUSKIES AND LEWITT CLASH ON WET FIELD

Notre Dame Juggernaut Most Gosh Awful Thing to Look At

So Says Pennsylvania Coach Whose Team Was Crushed

NEW YORK.—(INS).—"The Notre Dame juggernaut, 1931 model is the most gosh awful thing I have ever looked at," declared Lawson Robertson, coach of the University of Pennsylvania Athletics, while stopping over here today enroute to Philadelphia from South Bend, where Penn was crushed on Saturday, 49 to 0, by Notre Dame.

"The first 40 or 45 of these Notre Dame birds they let you look at are little fellows, no more than about 6 feet 1 inch tall," continued Robertson.

"The other 218 are really grown up and just one glance at that gang of civilized cave-men is enough to give any opposing squad a violent case of jitters."

Play With Nonchalance

"They play the game with more nonchalance than any bunch of athletes I have ever seen. There doesn't seem to be an uncontrolled nerve in the entire squad. They're always ready to fight, or to roll, as the case may be, always sure of themselves and when they get into motion, with frowns on their maps, it is a great time not to be opposed to them."

"But even in the tensest moments of the game they are not keyed up. There is no hysteria in the makeup of any of them. I'll tell you about one incident that happened last Saturday as proof that although they always are playing 100 per cent football they have elastic enough minds to extend them to spots beyond their own playing field."

Irish Are Gallant

"Tanner, one of the Penn ends, grabbed a forward pass and then a Notre Dame blocker grabbed him and Tanner hit the ground so hard that it was 10 minutes before anybody could convince him that it wasn't Mr. Chrysler's tower that fell on him. Well, just the same, as this Notre Dame fellow had downed Tanner, he did the gallant thing and helped him to his feet and, as he was doing so, he commented cheerfully:

"Say, that must be a wov of a game Northwestern and Minnesota are playing."

"Tanner, still groggy, wasn't sure that he heard right. So he asked: 'What did you say?' And this Notre Dame lad repeated his remark.

"How do you know?" demanded the woody Tanner. "What is going on in that game anyway?"

"The Notre Dame buckaroo seemed very much surprised."

"Say, kid," he demanded, "what's the matter with your team? Didn't you just hear them broadcasting around here? I've been getting the scores right along and they sure are interesting. Lots of good games today but that Northwestern-Minnesota is a wov."

Here's The Tipoff

"That's the tipoff of those Notre Dame people. Playing the game with all they have, playing it every minute of the way, always alert, yet always relaxed; just a lot of nice young fellows mixing business with pleasure, or pleasure with the business of knocking opposition football players lopsided and sideways."

"It makes me very happy to know that I am too old to be called upon to play football again and face Notre Dame of 1931."

Many Cage Quintets Signify Intentions Of Entering League

Twenty-five cage teams in Muscatine have signified their intentions of joining either one of the three Y. M. C. A. basketball leagues this winter. A. J. Lindley, physical director, announced today.

None of the teams have been definitely separated from any of the three leagues. The teams include: United Brethren, First Baptist, German Methodist, Muscatine Methodist, First Baptist, Bloomington Friends, Latter Day Saints, Grace Lutheran and Zion Lutheran.

Other quintets signifying their intentions are: Biting, Biting, Downey's, Boosters, Tradehouse, Standard Oil, Moose, Elks, Pig's, Tire Shop, Barry-Althaus, Heinz, Swifts, Postoffice, Courthouse, Brown's Business college, Iowa Peabody's, Y. M. C. A. and the A. O. U. W.

O'Brien and Jones To Clash Nov. 19

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—(INS).—Frankie O'Brien of Hartford, Conn., and Gorilla Jones of Akron, O., will meet here Nov. 19 in the windup of the semi-finals in the midweight elimination boxing tournament, it was announced today.

The pairing was approved by Gen. John V. Clinton, president of the National Boxing association. Henry Frippe of Newcastle, Pa., clashes with Oddone Piazza of Italy in the semi-windup.

G. Barker in Cross Country Win Again

NEW YORK.—(INS).—George Barker, New York university, today held the Metropolitan cross-country championship for the second consecutive year. He covered the six miles in 29:45, twenty-one seconds faster than the intercollegiate record.

New York university also won team honors, followed by Manhattan, Columbia, Fordham and C. C. N. Y.

CHILDREN SELL MOVIE TICKETS

Many View "Spirit of Notre Dame" at Theater Here

Although no actual check-up of the number sold has yet been made, school children of Muscatine have disposed of a number of tickets to the moving picture, "The Spirit of Notre Dame," which opened a three day engagement at the Fox Palace theater Sunday.

A substantial percentage of the monies received from the sale of tickets by the school children has been turned over to the local committee which is now engaged in raising its quota of the $1,000,000 fund for the construction and endowment of a Rockne memorial field house at Notre Dame university. Muscatine is in district No. 6, of which Robert L. Roach is chairman.

Rockne Noticed Individual

Contrary to general belief, Knute Rockne was not interested half so much in the variety football player as he was in the individual boy, whoever he might be, and how that boy spent his hours of recreation, according to information received today by Mr. Roach from A. R. Erskine, of South Bend, general chairman of the Memorial fund.

"Rockne," Mr. Erskine wrote, "wanted that individual boy to have every possible opportunity to develop manhood through sports. He personally supervised the system of inter-hall athletics by which the student body as a whole is drawn actively into healthful competitive sports."

The fact that Rockne had a few stars on his first squad did not interest him half so much, Erskine suggested, as the fact that 800 men were playing football, good or bad, every autumn.

System Adopted Now

"Incidentally," said Erskine, who is a lay trustee of Notre Dame university, "this inter-hall system, which Rockne so ardently championed, long ago pointed the way to what is now a major emphasis in collegiate athletics the country over, intramural sports. This system of sports for all, the spirit that it fosters and the character that it builds—this was Rockne's real concern."

That the Rockne Memorial, in whatever form, should be closely identified with his life work, was one of the principal reasons for deciding that the memorial should be a field house, Erskine asserted.

"Lining Memorial"

"It was also agreed, he said, that first, and above all else, it should be a 'living memorial.' 'A mere monument to Rockne,' Erskine added, 'is unthinkable. His memorial should be associated with life, with the constant sound of voices and intense activity. It should not be a place of sorrow but of joy. It should not be a place apart but be in the midst of men.'

The third consideration leading to the selection of a field house as the ideal form of a Rockne Memorial, according to Erskine, was that it "should be, if possible, something that Rockne himself would have liked, something that would have gladdened his heart."

Field House Ideal

In the opinion of Erskine and other officials of the Rockne Memorial association, the Rockne Memorial Field House will realize a hope that lay very close to Rockne's heart. He, better than any one, they point out, saw the good that would come from frequently speaking of that need at faculty meetings. The crowded conditions in the gymnasium, which made it impossible for the whole student body to get the most out of sports, distressed him. At the last meeting of the athletic board he attended, it is reported, he spoke informally again about a field house. He knew there were no funds for it, nor could he see the day when there might be, but he liked to refer to it as "the next step."

"This building," Erskine suggested, "will be not only a peculiarly fitting memorial to Knute Rockne but it will carry out his wish and hope and dream."

Late Dope on Football Teams

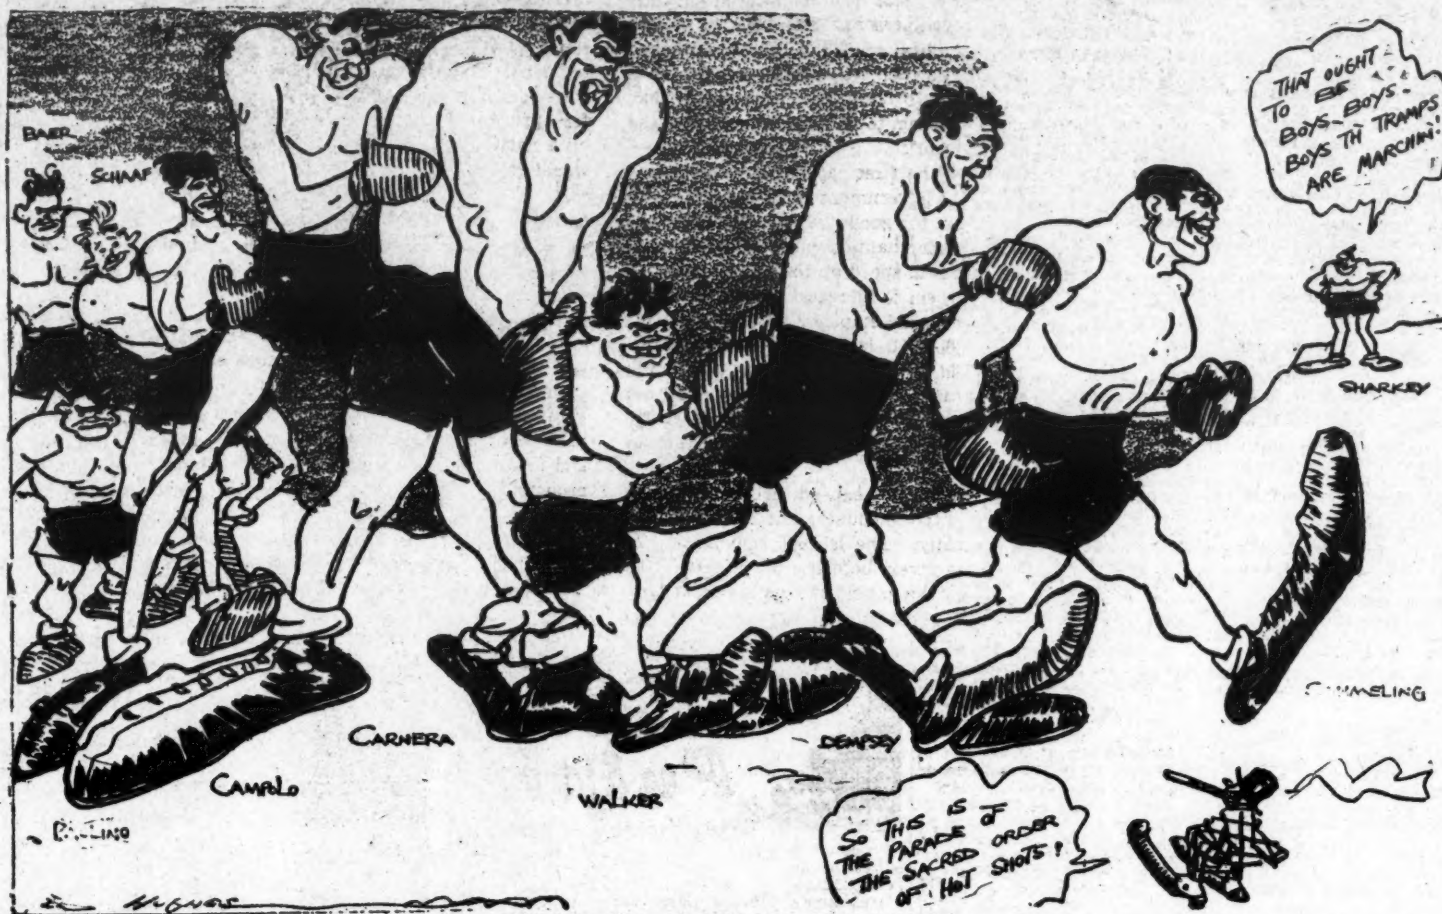

NOTRE DAME, Ind.—(INS).—Another light workout was scheduled today for Notre Dame's grid squad as the Irish prepared for the Navy tilt Saturday at Baltimore. In a short dummy defense session yesterday the varsity studied Navy plays. Later several new plays were rehearsed.

EVANSTON, Ill.—(INS).—Coach Dick Hanley was taking every precaution today to guard Northwestern's unbeaten eleven against a let-down before the Indian game Saturday. Hanley kept the varsity jumping last night in a long scrimmage with the B team.

MADISON, Wis.—(INS).—Development of an effective defense against Ohio State's double wing back formations occupied Wisconsin's attention today. In yesterday's scrimmage against Ohio State formations the varsity presented a patched up front with Capt. Hal Smith, Goldenberg, Strain and Kramholz absent from the lineup with injuries.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.—(INS).—A changed Illinois lineup will square off against Chicago Saturday. Art Schultz, who has been out of the lineup for a month, will be at full back, it was indicated today, and Eddie Schalk will pair off with Gill Berry at halfback. Another change

IOWA WORKS ON RUNNING PLAYS

Bill Rule Is Being Groomed as "Ace in the Hole"

IOWA CITY, Ia.—(INS).—In an early scrimmage made possible by the dismissal of classes for Armistice Day, the University of Iowa football squad continued to concentrate on its running attack today.

The line forays are being stressed for the first time in recent weeks because of the known weaknesses of the Purdue line, which will oppose the Hawkeyes at Lafayette, Ind.

Bill Rule, 145 pound sophomore from Boone and lightest man on the squad, was being groomed for a position as reserve halfback and the official Iowa "Ace in the Hole." Rule has demonstrated that he can elude yearling tacklers consistently as well as knife his way through the line for steady gains, and Coach Burt Ingwersen is planning to give him a chance to demonstrate what he can do against first class competition.

Fitting memorial to Knute Rockne but it will carry out his wish and hope and dream."

Campaign Country Wide

A country-wide campaign to raise a million dollar fund for the erection of the Rockne Memorial Field House will be conducted in November. Of this amount, $650,000.00 is required for construction, and $350,000 for endowment.

"And every dollar contributed toward the fund will go into the building of the field house," it is announced, "because all of the campaign expenses and the land for the building have been donated by the University of Notre Dame as the first contribution to the Rockne Memorial."

Wildcats Seeking to Keep Lead in Game With Indiana

By WEST PETERSON

CHICAGO.—(INS).—Three of the five Big Ten teams that are in a tie for second place in the standings list in games this Saturday.

While Northwestern is seeking to retain its stranglehold on the title against Indiana, Ohio State will be playing Wisconsin, Iowa, will be assailing Purdue and Chicago will be pestering the Illini.

Outside of the featured Hoosier-Wildcat engagement, the homecoming conflict of the Badgers and the Buckeyes at Madison is expected to attract most attention.

Both Ohio and Wisconsin at various times in the season were touted as championship possibilities. Both have won two games and lost one.

Because of the Cardinals' weak showing against Illinois last Saturday, together with the Buck's victory the same day over Navy, Ohio is considered to have the better end of the championship possibilities.

Besides determining which team is to remain in the tie for second place, the game will break an eleven-year deadlock.

Between 1913 and 1930 these two schools have each won four victories in their series. Their engagement last fall resulted in a scoreless tie.

The Wisconsin affair will be the third homecoming celebration the Ohio State gridgers have participated in this year.

Iowa Plays Purdue

Purdue, whose title hopes were shattered by Wisconsin, will not be risking a great deal in playing Iowa before a homecoming crowd at Lafayette.

The Boiler-makers, with two victories and one defeat in the loop, have an excellent chance to finish the season with no further losses. Their opponent a week from Saturday is Indiana, which is not reckoned as particularly stiff competition.

Iowa this year still is staggering under the blow delivered by the Big Ten eligibility judges. The Hawkeyes gained only one victory—and that over tiny George Washington—and their motto has been perforce: "Wait 'till next year or the year after." However, Purdue isn't overcome with over-confidence.

Plenty Of Fireworks

There will be plenty of fireworks when Chicago and Illinois, enemies of long standing, meet in Champaign Saturday. Neither of these teams is considered in the first division, but what they lack in proficiency is made up in what cheer leaders call "that fighting spirit."

This will be the 35th renewal of the Maroon-Illini rivalry. To date, Illinois has won sixteen games, Chicago has won fifteen, and four contests ended in ties. One of the most memorable combats in the series was in 1924, when "Red" Orange scored three touchdowns and the tilt was tied.

Starting the season with a bunch of raw recruits, Coach Bob Zuppke has steadily improved his material. An Illinois victory this week-end would not be surprising—and it certainly will be no shock next year if Illinois takes a place among the leaders, a place which it once held with some regularity.

Columbus expects to have its new baseball park ready for the opening of the 1932 season. The present park has been used for thirty years.

JACK TO BE AT MOLINE FRIDAY

Former Heavyweight Champion to Top Good Card

OMAHA, Neb.—(INS).—Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, tonight is scheduled to box Bearcat Wright, Omaha negro, four rounds in the main event of the fight card. Two other heavyweights will be at the ringside to finish out the four rounds in case the "Bearcat" is unable to stand Dempsey's pace.

MOLINE, Ill.—(Special).—Boxing fans in eastern Iowa and Illinois await with eagerness the coming of Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight champion, to the Moline fieldhouse Friday night where he will fight two rounds each with George Neason and Pete Wikstrom.

Dempsey fought at Des Moines Monday night and made a fine showing against the three fighters he entered the ring with. From the way the tickets have been going, a packed house is in prospect. The Moline fieldhouse will seat 7,500 people.

Besides the appearance of the famous heavyweight, there will be thirty more rounds of topnotch boxing. One of these bouts will find Barney Ross of Chicago and Young Terry of Davenport mixing in a scheduled eight round go.

Another bout of high caliber is that between Kid Leonard of East Moline and Pep Justo of Madison, Wis. Leonard has not fought since he was beaten by Lawrence Anderson early last summer but has been training hard the past few weeks and hopes to start on the comeback trail with a victory. There are three other bouts besides these.

Price Reduced for Iowa-Northwestern Grid Game Nov. 21

IOWA CITY, Ia.—(INS).—Reduced in price for the first time in recent years, tickets for the University of Iowa-Northwestern football game today were on sale for $2 and $1 in addition to the regular $3 ticket. Those for $2 are between the 10 and 30 yard lines and those for $1 are beyond the 10 yard line. The game will be here Nov. 21.

Loughran Thinks He Will Kayo Uzcudun

NEW YORK.—(INS).—Tommy Loughran, in town today to complete training for his bout with Paulino Uzcudun Friday night in Madison Square Garden, thinks he can knock out the basque where Max Schmeling failed. The odds are 10 to 1 that he won't, but Tom is an 8 to 5 favorite to win on points.

The American league turned down a proposal from Connie Mack that Frank Shellenback, veteran pitcher of the Coast league be allowed to throw a spitball in 10 paid league. Mack was planning to buy him had he been O. K'd.

In making his professional debut with Springfield of the Western association, Jim Rollins won his game and fanned ten Fort Smith batsmen.

The Oklahoma City club of the Western league bought up five young players from various clubs in the Nebraska State circuit.

Jim Bausch, former Kansas football star, is now competing in weight events for the Kansas City Athletics club. He is national champion in the pentathlon.

Babe Ruth Leader in Homers Ten Times in Thirteen Years

Bambino Undisputed A. L. Champ for 12 Straight Years

NEW YORK.—(INS).—Did you know that in the 13 years since Babe Ruth began to make four base gestures that he has been beaten only three times for the big league championship?

In 1919, when he first began to hit them out of the meadows, he piled forth 29 and his nearest rival was "Crash" Cravath with 12. In 1920 Ruth bumped out 54 while his nearest rival, George Sisler, compiled only 19. And in 1921, while the Babe rolled 59 round whippers off his bat, the best anybody else could do was 24.

He finished as runner-up to the great Rogers Hornsby in 1922, getting only 35 while the "Rajah" hooked forth 42. But that was a rather abbreviated season for the "Big Bam." He did some monkey business prior to the opening of 1922, incurred the displeasure of Judge Landis and was kept out of the lineup for quite a spell. He was sick later and the net result was that he played in only 110 games that year or about two thirds of the schedule.

Fred Williams tied the "Babe" with 41 homers in 1923, but in 1924 he stopped at 36. In 1925 Hornsby again took his measure, 39 to 25, but once again it is noted that he was stricken with illness and figured in only 98 games. He had a consolation of knowing that he had higher-home-run-per-game average than his conqueror.

Ruth reigned supreme in 1926 with 47, in 1927 with 60, in 1928 with 54 and in 1929 with 46. But in 1930 "Hack" Wilson rose up, busted loose with 56 and Ruth trailed him with 49.

In 1931, he waged a terrific season-long fight with Lou Gehrig, a teammate, seemed to be beaten up to the final week of play, then came on with a majestic rally and led Gehrig with 46 on the last day of play.

So one finds that through 13 years Ruth was undisputed American league champion for 12 successive seasons and was held even on the 13th, that he was king of the both big leagues in 1919, 1920, 1921, 1924, 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1929. Tied in 1923 and 1931, and beaten in 1922, 1925 and 1930.

Iowa State Sought For Charity Game

OMAHA, Neb.—(INS).—Negotiations were under way today for a charity game between Croftington and Iowa State college to be played at Omaha. T. N. Metcalf, athletic director for Iowa State has announced that nothing definitely has been decided since Croftington is one of several seeking a post-season game with the Ames team.

TEAMS ABOUT ON PAR IN STRENGTH IN BATTLE TODAY

Local Hopes High as Six Suspended Men Made Eligible

That it will take a lucky break to win the ball game this afternoon between the Little Musky and DeWitt gridgers became even more in evidence this morning when it was found upon awakening that "Old Man Rain" had turned loose midst the turmoil of the Armistice Day celebration to dump Jefferson field just enough to make it too slippery for fast play.

The two teams will trot onto the field with practically the same strength and it might be a fumble or blocked punt due to a slippery ball that will decide the tussle.

Hopes in the Musky encampment were somewhat bolstered this morning when announcement was made by Principal F. G. Messenger that the six regulars who were placed in detention the last three school days because of "skipping" classes, were scholastically eligible to play this afternoon. The other whole question of whether or not they will play lies on the answer of their coach, Bob Kinnam.

Three other Little Six foes will go into action also this afternoon, with only two of them battling each other. They are the Fairfield Trojans and the Washington Demons. They will meet on the former's gridiron this afternoon. The other conference team seeing action besides the Little Muskies is Ottumwa, which entertains North Hi of Des Moines.

PLEASANT PRAIRIE, Ia.—(Special)—Pupils of the May Grove school will present a two part program at the school, Thursday evening at 8:00 p. m. "The Strange Death of President Harding"

By Gaston Means, of Dept. of Justice and Private Detective for the President and Mrs. Harding.

Was He the Victim of a Jealous, Nagging Wife? —the Author Says—

"Mrs. Harding watches him like a hawk and nags, nags eternally. She never lets up!"

This Book Says, in the Private Detective's Words:

"Mr. Means, Warren Harding has had a very ugly affair with a girl named Nan Britton from Marion, Ohio. It goes back to the actual childhood of this girl. . . . I became suspicious of her when she was a child. She was a greatly over-developed child and wore extremely short dresses above the knees. . . . Mr. Means, you can see that I have work for you!" . . . What is the truth about Nan Britton? Here in THE STRANGE DEATH OF PRESIDENT HARDING the whole story is unravelled, bit by bit. Was Harding's love affair an "ugly" debauch or the romantic escape of a handsome man from a woman "years his senior, frosty, crabbed," her weak mind ruled by the mad voice of a clairvoyant?

And then—the end. "One day he was writing a letter. I casually asked him—to whom he was writing. He replied that he was writing to his old father in Marion. He lied. That letter was to Nan Britton. I intercepted it. . . . I was alone with the President. . . . It was time for his medicine. I gave it to him and he drank it. He lay back on the pillows a moment. His eyes were closed . . . then—suddenly—he opened his eyes wide . . ." "As she paused I could not refrain from the question; 'You think he knew?'" "Yes, I think he knew."

"Do I have first claim on the body? Can I prevent an autopsy? I have seen to it that no death mask was made of the President . . ." And then the always recurring question, "Where is Nan Britton's child?" Was Harding the innocent, helpless victim of a betrayed and desperate wife? The unsparing story is told in full detail in this book—told by the only person who knew it.

Mrs. Harding Says:

"I Saved Warren Harding From Impeachment!"

"You know—how in every way and at all times, in trying to protect my husband—I ran into a solid wall of opposition. Every way I turned—I was balked and laughed at . . . Warren Harding died—in honor—as Madam X said he would. Had he lived twenty-four hours longer—he might have been impeached . . . Nothing—nothing could stem the torrents that were pouring down on us."—Mrs. Warren G. Harding.

Every Man and Woman Should Read It—

The First Time the Full Story Has Been Told

The Most Startling Book You Have Ever Read!

Here, for the first time, is the full inside story of the Harding Administration.

Never before has this story been told—for the simple reason that no one but Gaston B. Means could tell it, and until the present he chose not to speak. Now, for reasons which he sets forth in an open letter to the American Citizenry, he tells his story—in full, unsparingly, with expurgation.

The reader is swept along by the dramatic recital of events which seem too bizarre for occurrence in American life—yet there, in the back of the book, are the substantiating notes, and in the possession of Mr. Means are the collaborating documents.

America was betrayed! Benedict Arnold, boldly bartering away the vital secrets of his comrades in arms, was no more false to his trust than these men of the "Ohio Gang" who exploited their political power regardless of the welfare of the American people.

The facts of this betrayal—and of the sordid personal friction between the White House occupants—here set forth by the confidant of the principal actors in it, grip the reader's sense of reality. Here is a book that every American should know about. Whether you read it for the facts of corruption it contains or for the thrill of its dramatic unfolding of one of the great tragedies of our time, you will find it to be perhaps the most sensational book you ever read.

The most compelling account of reality ever written—the terrible details of the political maelstrom which engulfed President Harding—and his timely and strange deliverance by death—now disclosed to us by a man who, knowing all, speaks freely after a long silence—a simple narrative of startling dramatic facts that the whole nation is gasping over—"How Daugherty Made Harding President" . . . and ruled him . . . Mr. Daugherty doesn't ask—he demands! . . . how Mrs. Harding, "Child of Destiny" shadowed her husband . . . how the "teapot dome" scandal was brewed . . . how the "government" clique scooped in, as Prohibition graft alone, over $7,000,000.00 . . . how "Jess Smith Threatens to tell Everything" . . . and suddenly commits suicide . . . and lastly, the details of how the President died . . . the most sordid yet fascinating series of climaxes ever exposed, revealing the most dramatic human episode in 20th century political history.

The Episodes of This Expose Are More Thrilling Than the Wildest Fiction

"You're afraid of Harry Daugherty."

"Silly!" he retorted. I could see that he was greatly annoyed. She rasped:

"I'm no fool, Warren. You can't fool me. They force you to sign anything they please. You are afraid of them. Tell me. I'll find out. I always find out."

Nag. Nag. Nag. God—what a life the man was leading.

"I've begun the investigation of Nan Britton, according to your instructions."

But she was not to be diverted from the question under discussion.

"Wait! All I want now to confirm my own proof is a good look into the face of that child! Your next assignment from me is this: bring that child here for me to see!"

I rose to go. Further conference with her was now useless.

"Mrs. Harding—you've made a thief of me—and now you want to turn me into a kidnapper."

Her white face flamed. She was furious.

"I want to take the trip through Europe. . . . The only obstacle that stands in the way is Nan Britton! . . . How do I know what she may do? . . . That girl is the curse of my life."

"Gaston—Jess Smith has committed suicide. He has shot himself."

I said nothing. I was incapable of speech . . .

"Well?" I finally asked.

His voice was short and tense.

"You know your business: do as you are told and ask no questions. He is down in his own apartment. Nobody is there—yet. You go down there and search his body and bring me—every scrap of paper that you find. Get those papers. The key is in the latch."

"Am I deputized for this job?"

"Yes, you are! Go and guard the body, and bring those papers to me. Search the apartment if you do not find them on his body."

Senator Norris' Splendid Plan to End the Depression

Senator George W. Norris has announced that he will soon submit to a conference of Progressives in Washington a legislative program, the main feature of which will be a proposal for a three billion dollar bond issue to build roads and thus provide work for the unemployed.

We sincerely hope that the Progressive senators and representatives will adopt this plan or one like it. A three billion dollar loan by the government at a time when the government is having a deficit of several million dollars every day may sound to many like a piece of monumental extravagance, but it is exactly the opposite.

The government is going in the hole faster than during any other peace period of its history. It is doing so solely because of the depression which has decreased taxable incomes and other revenue sources to a tremendous extent. Positively the only remedy for this deficit is a series of constructive steps by the government that will lift us out of the depression. The longer the depression lasts the bigger this deficit will grow. The present deficit is now on the basis of two billion dollars a year. If the depression lasts two years it will increase our federal indebtedness four billion dollars. Any step that will stop this terrible leak will be money well spent.

If Senator Norris' proposed $3,000,000,000 emergency appropriation is spent building up real valuable national assets, instead of it being wasted, it will be SAVED to the nation. Under economical management this three billions can be transmuted into property worth more than three billion dollars. It will be a valuable national investment that will increase in value in the future and make the nation richer. While we are thus building up national property worth more than $3,000,000,000, we will be buying a great deal of material and hiring a million or so unemployed persons. The ordering of this great amount of material will take off the market many goods that are now glutting it and slowing down production. This will cause the factories to jump into increased production at once. This will cause them to increase their forces and put many more persons to work.

On the other hand, after the first pay day, the million or so new men employed by the government in internal improvement will rush to the stores for goods. This will empty the store shelves and cause the merchants to place faster and bigger orders for goods. This will speed up the factories all over the country and cause them to increase their operating forces. If the government should employ 3,000,000 men, this would employ another 3,000,000 in privately-owned enterprises. This in turn would speed up purchasing power and demand so that more and more men would be employed and the purchasing power of the people would be so constantly increased that we would soon find ourselves out of the depression.

This idea of vast governmental expenditures to stop the governmental deficit and lift the country out of the depression is growing very rapidly. The largest combination of newspaper in America is actively behind a plan to have the government issue bonds to the extent of five billion dollars, instead of three billion. Practically all Progressive senators and representatives are agreed on this point. It would be a great event in the history of the upbuilding of our nation if the incoming Congress would put such a great plan into effect. The sentiment behind this move is so widespread and is growing so rapidly that we doubt if President Hoover, who is bitterly opposed to it, would dare to veto it.

Before any such emergency appropriation is spent, however, the field for the most wise and profitable expenditure of this sum should be surveyed by a competent commission with the view that none of it shall be wasted, but shall add to the permanent wealth of the nation. For instance, if such a sum were spent in the reforestation of our public lands unsuitable for agriculture, millions of men might be employed to build up a national asset grievously needed right now, and which would rapidly increase in value to many times the original cost. The new public timber resource would not only supply us with a public revenue that would substantially reduce taxes in the future, but the new timber supply sold at a reasonable price would save private industry billions of dollars.

Why Doesn't Mr. Hoover Expose the Navy League?

In the present controversy between the Navy League and President Hoover over naval expenditures, President Hoover has resorted to the peculiar device of appointing a judge, jury and prosecuting attorney of his own selection to try him and pronounce judgment on his policies. He selected his own committee and they tried him and found that he is all right in every respect. This has caused no end of amusement throughout the country, and in addition it has established a rather dangerous precedent for public executives in the future.

Mr. Hoover's board has charged that the Navy League has uttered "many inaccuracies, false assumptions and erroneous conclusions."

Considering the record of the Navy League, Mr. Hoover did not go far enough when he appointed a board to merely defend his policies. His policies are their own defense or condemnation since they are now before the country and may be judged by their effects. President Hoover should have his committee expose the whole propaganda of the Navy League and other super-patriotic organizations which are sparing no efforts to fasten upon this country the same kind of vicious military system that we said that we were going to end forever when we entered the world war.

We wonder how short people's memories are. At the naval disarmament conference in Geneva several years ago, the principal factor that wrecked that conference and made a naval disarmament agreement impossible was the Navy League of America, American navy officers and other militaristic agencies. They employed a press agent of most mendacious and shady character whose false propaganda aroused the jealousies and suspicions of the delegates to such an extent that the conference was wrecked.

Has Mr. Hoover forgotten this? Has he forgotten the incessant militaristic activities and propaganda of this organization ever since? Has he forgotten how such militaristic organizations put on their huge preparedness campaigns before the world war and through their gross exaggerations and false and vicious propaganda finally lashed us into such national fury that our entrance in the world war and its colossal folly and crime became inevitable?

If Mr. Hoover remembers these things, why does he not expose these kind of organizations by means of his committee, instead of having his committee merely prepare a written apology for him?

The Evening Story

INTERLUDE
By HELEN BARTON

Everywhere was merrymaking and to the girl hastening homeward through the deepening November dusk over the sounds of revelry seemed to strike a false note, for to Eleanor Chase the holiday had meant little, even on that far distant day years ago, for she had already lost Dale Caswell in the turmoil of war, and the hostilities, even, could not heal the void in her heart left by his passing.

How could people be so happy? How could they forget all those other mothers, sisters, sweethearts, wives? To be sure, it meant the saving of all the living contenders in the war, but did it bring back the dead? And so the girl's bitterness increased with each unhappy thought until she was on the point of tears when she turned the key in her door and switched on the living room lights as she removed coat, hat and gloves.

On the mantel a vase of fresh roses stood before the silver framed photograph of a soldier and, as usual, Eleanor paused to glance at the picture, catching her breath softly as a mere old picture reached her ears from some pardoning order of the past.

Dinner was difficult that evening, for Eleanor kept hearing snatches of music, ray rattles of drums and occasional blares of bugles, and the food she had so carefully prepared in the hope of forgetting some of her blue thoughts was like so much sawdust. No use going out; every theater would have a memorial program; no matter where she might go there would be reminders! Resolutely, Eleanor laid a fire in the big living room fireplace and then with the flames dancing high up the wide old chimney she took several books from the bookcase and settled herself before the fire to lose her unhappy thoughts in books.

For perhaps an hour she read only with a sigh and a frown. Only 8 o'clock! Her hand unconsciously strayed to the radio, and with the station already tuned from last night's program she turned the switch and a joyful, carelessly happy voice was speaking, almost as though in the room!

"Station XYZ, the Northern Farmer, broadcasting from our Hotel Kenmore studio, and we have with us tonight Jack and Gene, the popular harmonizers, and they're going to sing you a few songs. I'm sure you'll all be glad to recall Jack and Gene! And in spite of herself, Eleanor smiled. She had been listening to Jack and Gene every Friday night since she had started working on the paper in Boston and she had come to realize that whatever XYZ broadcast was worth listening to, especially the harmonizing of these two singers!

Several popular numbers were sung and the girl was listening raptly when the piano in that distant studio over 3,000 miles away struck a chord that the listening girl hadn't heard for years. She hadn't heard since she had looked the baby grand piano ten years ago!

"Smile the while— you kissed me sad adieu! When the clouds roll by, I'll come to you! Wait and pray each night for me."

"Till we meet again!" Silence so absolute that the vibrant, mellow blended voice might have been singing there in the old-fashioned room, instead of out there in that distant studio; silence that was broken, finally, by the harsh sobbing of a girl as her copy-righted head went down on the

REDDY FOX DOES A MEAN THING

Reddy Fox had tried all the old tricks he could think of with which to fool Bowser the Hound and not one of them had succeeded. It was clear that Bowser was wise and he used to be and knew just what to do when his wonderful nose told him that Reddy had done something to make a break in his trail. Reddy had tried jumping to one side from the stump he had been mixing his trail by criss-crossing it. He had tried jumping from stone in the Laughing Brook. He had tried running in the shallow water. He had tried everything he could think of and every time Bowser had been smart enough to see through the trick and Reddy had gained only time enough to get his breath.

There was one thing he could do, but which he wouldn't do unless he absolutely had to. He could make straight for his home, his underground house. Once there he would be safe for the time being, anyway. But to do that would lead to Bowser straight to that house and then Bowser would know where it was and this might lead to all kinds of trouble. He knew that Grumpy Fox would say if he did such a thing. No, he must think of some other way of getting rid of Bowser, some new trick. He was getting tired. He wasn't in the best of condition to run. He was too fat with good living. He lost his breath too easily.

Suddenly into Reddy's head popped the memory of how only a few days before the Hound had chased Lightfoot the Deer. He had seen that chase and the terrible eagerness with which those dogs had followed Lightfoot's trail. Probably Bowser the Hound would raise a hunt for Lightfoot that hunt him. He began to wonder what would happen if he should happen, just happen, mind you, to cross Lightfoot's trail. Then, a thought came. He thought, "Why not try it and see what would happen? At first he put that mean thought away from him, but the more tired he grew the more certain he became that he could not get rid of Bowser with his usual tricks, the more that thought persisted.

He was nearer Lightfoot's hiding place in the daytime. He wondered if Lightfoot was there. "Bow-wow-wow!" roared Bowser only a little way behind him. Reddy shivered and headed straight for that favorite hiding place of Lightfoot's. As he drew near he heard a chash in the brush ahead and he knew what it meant. Lightfoot had bounded to his feet and was bounding away in sudden flight. Straight in ran Reddy into the brush where Lightfoot had been lying. He saw Lightfoot's tracks and his nose told him that the scent in them was strong because they had just been made. For just a little way he followed them to make sure that Bowser would smell them. Then he leaped far to one side and ran as fast as he could to a little hill where he could watch what would happen.

He felt mean. How could he feel otherwise when he had done such a mean and really dreadful thing? At the same time he felt that he had been very smart. It would be Lightfoot now who would have to fool Bowser if he could. He saw Bowser enter the thicket where Lightfoot had been lying. The sound of Bowser's voice ceased. Then came an eager whine and the sound of sniffing and snuffing. Suddenly Bowser's hunting cry rang out again and out from the thicket he burst, his nose to the ground, but it wasn't from the side from which Lightfoot had run. Reddy gave a little gasp. Bowser was not following Lightfoot; smart trick had failed just as the others had. You see Bowser had been taught that he must never follow deer. Reddy didn't know that. But he knew that his trick had failed and that once more he must run, once more he must try to think some way to fool Bowser the Hound, and all the time he knew, too, that the thing he had tried to do was something he should not be guilty of. It was a thing to be ashamed of and in his heart he was ashamed. (Copyright 1931, by T. W. Burgess.)

People's Pulpit

Midwest Free Press
Muscatine, Ia.
Dear Editor:—

Muscatine's "Jubilee Days" are over and so once again the retail merchants can look back and without much jubilation compare the puny efforts of small time promoters with the days when KTNT was on the air.

What brilliant mind conceived the idea that the farmers around Muscatine could be enticed to visit the city to see a few lamp posts carefully decorated with shriveled cornstalks? Why the very presence of cornstalks took all semblance of jubilee out of the minds of any farm folk. The farmers have acre after acre of cornstalks and it only serves to remind them of the low prices they receive for their labors. Did such a display tend to put the people in a buying frame of mind?

And the street show, well that was so ridiculous that it insulted the intelligence of the fifty or sixty persons who witnessed it. Jubilee Days, for whom? Surely not the retail merchants for it cost them a lot in donations and the sales resulting from it judging from the number of persons who were in town, did not justify the expenditure of a penny.

Yes indeed the retail merchants can look back and sigh for the days when KTNT was on the air bringing countless thousands of visitors to Muscatine, and those visitors spent money without it costing the merchants a dime for cornstalk decorations.

At that no one is to blame except those same retail merchants and I can easily imagine their thoughts as they compare their Jubilee Day receipts with the total of business done during the KTNT days. I can imagine how they must feel toward the Chamber of Commerce solicitors who come to them for donations in a vain attempt to stir up business, and I don't doubt but what many a canvasser for funds has been told "Well when KTNT was on the air we had no solicitors begging and Baker brought thousands to Muscatine."

I am an "outsider" but I have been a close observer of the community and it is my idea that until the retail merchants come to their sense and organize their own retail merchants association and keep out all professional men such as Doctors, Lawyers, Bankers, Newspaper men etc., the retail situation will steadily become worse.

The retail merchants problem is one that is peculiar to themselves and why they will entrust the solution of it to men like doctors, lawyers, etc., who have no real understanding of merchandising and who are not vitally interested in hearing the local merchants cash registers ring is quite beyond me. Surely there must be some business men among the merchants of Muscatine (though I admit that past performances such as the Jubilee Days and the fact that the merchants themselves show a woeful lack of gray matter by letting other than retail men dictate their policies, apparently prove otherwise). Still among the hundreds of store owners there must be some who realize that a continuance of the present system is rapidly leading them to ruin.

And while I hardly expect KTNT to come back on the air, if other interests not connected with Norman Baker were to obtain control of it, for candidly I do not think there is any one in Muscatine capable of running the station so that it would have the popular appeal it had, still I do believe that were the retail merchants to organize and control their own destiny that they could overcome a little of the loss that the closing of KTNT has caused them.

The late lamented Jubilee Days have I trust accomplished at least this one thing, will be well worth the price, if it has set the individual retail merchant to thinking.

Give It a Thought

By Joseph A. Sadony

When you find that you have done all you can,
And the inevitable stands before you,
Then remember those words, "Tiny will, oh Lord, be done,
Mine is helpless."

Do not waste all your tears for those unworthy,
Or you may have none to shed for yourself.
When you need them most,
Consider the balloonist who must not throw away his sand-bags of ballast.

Just to fly high.
He may later need each grain to save himself from death.
By casting over the last sack to lift him over the last mountain.

Since you have made success, have you not starved out those anti-cipations you intended to enjoy? If not, where are they?

And why do you use stimulants to enjoy what you used to enjoy in all its pure simplicity?
The old ride on a wagon or bicycle,
The swimming hole, the old quartet,
Whistling or humming—where are they all?

Have they all died like your baby boy or girl?
When they came into manhood and womanhood?

Surely not dead; only asleep for want of an awakening.
Put to sleep by habit to conquer, achieve and possess.

Was it a good bargain, after all?

Are you sure that your wants are really for your own good,
Or only whims for the moment.
Why not be offered an appetizing meal just after you have eaten one.

And then one just after a twenty-four hour fast,
And see if "wants" are always the same under different circumstances. Then apply the deductions to your real wants.
Before judging if worth wanting what you want.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

ELMER TWITCHELL ON THE MANCHURIAN MESS

Dear Ed:

I am dropping you a few lines just to urge that you do all you can to make America realize the importance of keeping its nose out of this Chinese-Japanese trouble. Eighty per cent of the American people think Manchuria is some kind of a fur, anyhow.

If Secretary Shimon sends any more notes to Japan he should make them anonymous. Manchuria is too far away for the average American to take any interest in it. As a matter of fact, he would get a pack of cigarettes from New Jersey. A war in Manchuria would be so far away that even our Congressmen would refuse to go over and visit the trenches for the news reels.

This war should be confined strictly to the Chinamen and the Japanese. It's their war and they can have it. The Chinese have been at war so many years that they won't even notice that this is a new one. As for the Japanese, they have been wanting a war for a long time as a matter of national prestige, as they realize that they can no longer depend on those Japanese acrobatic troupes for publicity.

America couldn't conveniently get into another world at this time anyhow, as Smedley Butler has retired. Gene Tunney is married and settled down. Newt Baker is back, practicing law and Colonel House isn't the man he used to be. We would be up against it for a good slogan, too. We don't know any Chinaman or Japanese well enough to kindle up and such lusty hatred as we managed to work up against Kaiser Bill, and I ask you can imagine the American people rallying 'round a battle cry of "Marshall Lai Chang Fu must go!" or anything like that?

Still, I am afraid that we may get into it if we don't pull in our belts. I have no convictions one way or the other; in fact, some of my best friends are Japanese, but I urge all Americans to be neutral. My advice can be summed up in three warnings:

1. Don't be seen talking with Manchurians in public places.
2. Keep away from both Chinese and Japanese for the present.
3. If you have neighbors who are Chinese, Japanese or Manchurians, avoid intimate contact until the crisis passes.

Hoping that you will do what you can to keep America out of the conflict, I am,

Yours very truly,
Elmer Twitchell.

How Old Is Ann?

(Aime Photo)

This antiquated—and still unanswered—question figured in a court proceeding in New York City when counsel for Ann Pennington obtained permission from Supreme Court Justice Salvatore Cuttolo to withdraw her suit for $100,000 against Lever Bros., soap manufacturers, and the J. Walter Thompson Advertising agency, upon the motion that a settlement had been reached without their efforts.

A Youthful Fashion

Coats in the new shade of orange red appropriately named Spanish tile have been taken up with enthusiasm by the younger set. And the reason is not hard to guess for this shade is one of the most becoming a young person can wear while the result is "not so good" when maturity essays it. When mink is used for trimming the height of distinction is reached.

The New Clips

These newest of clips which originated in Paris are simply miniature curtain rings copied in gold metal or silver. Wear them on your hat, on your tweed or corduroy suit and on your opera pumps.

For Small Persons

Does your small son need dozens of rompers? Then you will want to know about some simply adorable little ones made of linen and embroidered and hand scalloped and priced a little under a dollar. They have round little collars and are as masculine as one could desire.

That Convenient Tray

It is about the most convenient thing we have seen in a long time, this painted wooden tray just the right size for serving drinks or coffee with its own matching stand. The entire set of stand and tray cost less than three dollars and comes in black, in two shades of green and red.

Something New

Tall graceful goblets with the stand in the shape of an exquisite figure of a woman supporting on her shoulders the goblet part are something distinctly new and different. They would make a charming gift for a bride.

DARE INTERPRETS the MODE

This sports suit is of heavy sage green and grey tweed with a chartreuse crepe de chine blouse. (A New York Model.)

But they are very lovely, these cold blues and blue whites, so well forgive the Haute Couture for heaping chill on chill. These ice colors range from white with a very faint blue cast, through pale cold blues, up to slate, a combination of grey and blue—all colors being without the slightest warmth, and therefore demanding a color and vividness of personality on the part of the wearer. Almost invariably these ice fabrics are made up in a way that suggests the slender, aloof coldness of an icicle, this illusion being helped out by the use of bias cutting applied in a twisting line, and by twistingly incrustated trains.

And the trimmings and accessories, my dear! All the crystal and silver one could wish—very delicate silver lace being an attractive and intimate way of relieving too great severity of cut. When rhinestones are used, they are used sparingly, as if to give up a picture of a sunbeam touching some scattered points on a serene field of ice! 'N' the jewel chosen by those who know how to accompany coldly-tinted costumes is the aquamarine, that delicate, faintly blue-green gem of great clarity! So, who can regret Paris' decision for bigger and better coldness?

HEAVY tweed is being worn nowadays to protect Miladi! Modern from the cold, the while it's supple enough to tailor beautifully and without any hint of heaviness or bulk. The suit illustrated depicts this heavy tweed, in a sage green and grey mixture, very trimly tailored. The skirt has a pointed hip yoke and a deep inverted pleat in front, and the jacket has novel little revers and slanting pockets. And it's quite heavy enough to wear on the streets in the very coldest weather, with the addition, perhaps, of your favorite fur scarf!

Beef Stew with Dumplings

One pound of beef (bottom of round), cut into thin pieces. If there is any fat on it put into iron kettle to fry out, then add the meat and stir till all pieces are seared; add hot water to cover meat and cook slowly about 2 hours; then add 1 pound parsnips cleaned and cut in small pieces, also 1 pound small potatoes pared and quartered and salt and pepper to taste. Have just enough water to cook without burning, for it is not to be like soup. The potato will cook to pieces and make the juice thick.

"Silly?" The girl had touched his arm. "Don't you know that it isn't silly to think of such things, just because they've never been done?" Suddenly she whirled, and called: "Uncle Dan!" A red-faced man with gray hair and a bulbous nose halted abruptly in his swift course from the padroom entrance of the big top.

"Well, what is it? What is it, Sue?" he asked. Then he noticed Joe Barry. "Want to see me, young fellow?"

"No, but I do," the girl broke in. "We've just been talking about you. He has the most wonderful idea for it! And I thought maybe the three of us could talk things over—maybe—"

"Looking for a job?" asked Uncle Dan. "That's what I'm looking for," said the girl. "Looking for a job?" asked Uncle Dan again.

Joe Barry stammered. "Well, I don't know—yes, I guess I'd sure like one—"

"Sling."

"Yes, sir."

"Sue here says you've got ideas. Sue's a pretty good judge. Let's have them." Suddenly, he veered. "What's your name?"

A sudden constriction rose in Joe Barry's throat; he strove to cover it with a cough. He felt his features grow cold and suddenly hot.

deception. Suddenly he straightened, clear-eyed.

"I might as well tell you, Miss Dayton. I'm up against some problems in this thing," came grimly. "A man made me a proposition which he asked me to keep a secret. I've got to keep my word to him."

"Certainly." There was a hint of surprise in her tone.

"It rather ties me up—until I can see him and get my release. But I've been thinking it over. He made me this offer when I needed a job pretty badly. It's only fair to him to keep my part of the agreement until I can tell him I won't go through with it."

"Then you've decided?" Sue Dayton was plainly pleased. "Oh, that's some. Somewhat, I think you were meant for a circus."

"I know I was!" Joe Barry laughed boisterously. "I didn't realize it until today. It's what I've wanted all my life. I'm going to be a circus man."

Events were happier after that. Sue Dayton did most of the talking—mostly of the show. Then at last, they walked toward the circus grounds; twilight was coming; the townspeople, by twos and threes, and steadily greater groups, were beginning to move toward the lot. They said goodbye, ingeniously, with the hesitant frankness of young blood. Then grim again, lips thin, Joe Barry moved swiftly for the restaurant where he had left his bundle of old clothing, and after that to the station.

ing that was his home. Strangely weak in his knees, he opened the old door and started up the creaking stairway.

"Well, where you been this time?" It was a querulous, angry voice from the first landing. "No beds made, no rooms swept out—think we're going to keep on standing for this?"

Joe Barry snapped a rejoinder and went on. He reached the door of his room, and pawing deep into his pocket for his personal key, sent it into the lock. The door yielded, a faint V of light went into the room from the gas jet in the hall. Joe Barry halted, his lower jaw loose in surprise. On the floor before him lay something metallic, something which had been pushed under the door. Then he sat on the bed and laughed.

It had been a joke! It had been a joke, that's all—just somebody playing a joke on him. They'd slipped up here during the day and returned that pass-key he had before Martin, by slipping it under the door. But as suddenly he sobered. Nobody would give a fellow a thousand dollars for a joke! He looked at the pass-key; suddenly he went to the gas jet and struck a match, illuminating the room. He searched the floor for a note. There was nothing. He jerked out his cheap watch, suddenly ticking with clock-like resonance. Five minutes to ten.

"I won't give him any leeway," Joe had slumped to the bed again, the pass-key still in his right hand. Again he studied it. Why had they slipped it under the door? Just come up here and slipped the thing under the door—

A minute passed; Joe confirmed it by looking at his watch. Then he began to count, one, two, three, four, five—he wondered how much a person would have to count before it all made a minute. He remembered how the old photographer back in Waverly used to count for time exposures, one thousand and one, one thousand and two, one thousand and three—

He started and listened. The stairs creaked. As if some one were moving upward. Or maybe it was just some one going down to the street.

Suddenly he jerked to his feet, as if jolted by electricity. Some one was at the door. Staccato, hollow pounding. Joe Barry moved forward. He swung wide the door. Four men stood there, well-dressed men, staring quietly at him. One flipped his coat back, and the edge of a shield gleamed in the gauntlet. "You're Joe Barry," he said, more as a statement than a question. Joe could not answer. Two of the men dodged swiftly behind him. "Fan him for a rod," came the coldly monotonous voice. "Better not take any chances."

The magnifying glass tells the story! See how the compact wheat kernel has been "popped" into a plump, crunchy nibble with the full food value and the glorious flavor of the whole grain.

Eat WHOLE GRAIN foods Avoid devitalized foods!

LONG ago science rejected devitalized foods because they lack balanced nourishment. And yet for years most breakfast foods have been devitalized—stripped of vital elements found in the whole kernel. NOW science offers Wheat Pops and Rice Pops—the first breakfast foods ever "popped" from whole grains. POPS brings you the rich food value Mother Nature stores away in the entire kernel—minerals, proteins, carbohydrates and that gentle laxative—bran. Ask your grocer for Wheat Pops or Rice Pops by name—avoid devitalized cereals.

Several years ago Wenner served several years at Anamosa on a 10-year sentence imposed for participation in a roadhouse robbery.

ARMISTICE DAY

NOVEMBER

1918

The thirteen years that have gone by since the signing of the Armistice, have seen many changes—readjustments and new ideas; the tendency to gain a better plane of living. In our ceaseless efforts to better ourselves we must not forget our boys who sacrificed their lives in order that we might enjoy this blessed state of freedom.

In Flanders Fields

*In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.*

*We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders Fields.*

*Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders Fields.*

—John McCrae

ELEVENTH

1931

To the memory of those who gave themselves so graciously, this day of commemoration is dedicated.

Those boys believed in their country, and they fought for their rights. Believe in your country today as they did thirteen years ago; and you will find, as they did, that your own land is worth fighting for and living in.
